Description of F Endorsement

If you drive a forklift on the road, you must have a F Endorsement on your driver licence. Note that the licence endorsement and the licence class systems work together. Your licence has to cover both the type of vehicle and its weight.

What is the definition of a 'road'?

The definition of a road, for the application of transport laws, is very broad. It includes not only streets and highways but also any place the public has access to—including bridges, culverts, beaches, riverbeds etc...

Requirements for NZTA

- Must hold your Full Car Licence (Other than a motorcycle licence) for your F Endorsement. OSH Certificate does not require a licence but you must be 15 years old.

Requirements for Drivetech

- Your Licence
- Bring Steel Cap boots if you have them.
- Day Glow jacket if you have one.

Description of OSH Certificate

If you drive a forklift in the workplace and not on a road you only need your OSH Certificate.

What is the definition for the work place?

The definition of 'in the work place' means you can only use a forklift behind closed gates. It cannot go on streets and highways or any place the public has access to—including bridges, culverts, beaches, riverbeds, reserve lands, wharfs and road shoulders. Whether of right or not

NOTE: Refresher Training recommended by OSH, 3 yearly.
